“Marvel Avengers S.T.A.T.I.O.N.” opens not only to trainee agents, but also to future little heroes. Together with the national academy of sciences, NASA and other institutions, the exhibition has jointly developed interdisciplinary teaching and experience devices including biology, physics, chemistry, astronomy, geometry, engineering, energy, and material science, creating a unique S.T.E.A.M. educational experience. As evidenced by operating data from major cities like New York and Singapore, the Marvel Avengers S.T.A.T.I.O.N. also is an attractive experience for groups of teenagers.

It has been recommended by the governments of the UK, France, Singapore, Australia, Russia and other countries as a practice base for the students' extra-curricular science education. With such popularity, the group visitors even need to make an appointment in advance.

Of course, this is just the tip of the iceberg at the Station. View the Iron Man Hulkbuster suit at more than 3 meters high, explore the Hall of Armor, enter Bruce Banner's laboratory, watch as a group of ants in communication with Ant-Man scatter on the ground and guide where you walk, and peruse the original costumes, operational equipment and weapons of 13 Marvel Super Heroes and 2 ultimate villains... ... At this point, we've completely violated the Marvel principle of a non-spoiler! For the rest of the secrets, you will need to discover them for yourself.
