

'Jurassic World: The Exhibition' Is Roaring Into Sydney for the Dinosaur Franchise's 30th Anniversary

Walk through the famous gates and get up close to lifelike dinosaurs to celebrate three decades since 'Jurassic Park' first hit cinemas.

By Sarah Ward
JULY 18, 2023

504 Shares

If you're a dinosaur fan in Australia, life keeps finding a way to indulge your interest in prehistoric creatures. In Brisbane, the Dinosaurs of Patagonia museum showcase is currently displaying impressive fossils. In Melbourne and later Sydney, Dinos Alive: An Immersive Experience is about to hit. And also in the Harbour City, Jurassic World: The Exhibition will soon roar into town with its own critters, as well as a celebration of 30 years since the first Jurassic Park movie initially rampaged across the big screen.

Yes, it's a great time to be fascinated with dinosaurs right now — we've seen two seasons of Prehistoric Planet on streaming in the past two years, too — and this latest exhibition arrives as part of a global tour. A showcase with the same name displayed in Melbourne back in 2016, but this visit comes after stops everywhere from London, San Diego, Paris and Madrid to Seoul, Shanghai and Toronto. On offer: life-sized, lifelike versions of the movie franchise's animals.

Expect to feel like you've been transported to Isla Nublar, complete with a walk through the big-screen saga's famed gates. From there, you'll walk through themed environments featuring dinos, including a brachiosaurus, velociraptors — yes, get ready to say "clever girl" — and a Tyrannosaurus rex.

Also linking in with the animated Jurassic World: Camp Cretaceous series, there'll be baby dinos, including the show's Bumpy.

Sydneysiders and visitors to the New South Wales capital will be able to get roaming, and staring at animatronic dinos, from Friday, September 22 at the 3000-square-metre SuperLuna Pavilion at Sydney Showground in Sydney Olympic Park. Exactly how long the exhibition will hang around for hasn't been announced, except that it'll be a limited stay. If it'll head to other Australian cities afterwards also hasn't been revealed.

Now, all that's left is to decide which Jurassic franchise character you want to emulate (the best choices: Laura Dern's palaeobotanist Ellie Sattler, Sam Neill's palaeontologist Alan Grant and Jeff Goldblum's mathematician Ian Malcolm, of course).

And no, when Michael Crichton penned Jurassic Park in 1990, then Steven Spielberg turned it into a 1993 film, they wouldn't have expected that this'd be the result three decades — and five more movies — later.

Jurassic World: The Exhibition will display at SuperLuna Pavilion, Sydney Showground, Sydney Olympic Park from Friday, September 22 — head to the exhibition's website to join the ticket waitlist.

VIEW COMMENTS

504 Shares

CONCRETE PLAYGROUND.

- POPULAR EVENTS
  - Auckland
  - Brisbane
  - Melbourne
  - Sydney
  - Wellington
  - Adelaide
  - Jessica Mauboy At FIFA Fan Festival™
  - Aperol Kombi Tour 2023
  - FIFA Fan Festival™ Sydney
  - Archie Party 2023
  - Bastille Festival 2023
- POPULAR STORIES
  - Three Australian Wineries Were Just Named in the World's Best 50 Vineyards for 2023
  - Immersive Experience 'Dinos Alive' Is Bringing Its Life-Sized Animatronic Dinosaurs to Australia
  - We're Giving Away the Ultimate Lake Macquarie Getaway for You and Seven Mates
  - Five Spectacular Musicals Hitting Sydney Stages in 2023
  - Your Guide to NSW's Regional Events and Festivals
- POPULAR PLACES
  - Fratelli Pulcinella Parramatta
  - Foreign Return Restaurant & Bar
  - Bar SOUL
  - Petermen
  - Annata
- EXPLORE SYDNEY
  - Sydney Restaurants
  - Sydney Cafes
  - Sydney Pubs
  - Sydney Bars
  - Sydney Shops
  - Sydney Things to do